THE ORIGIN OF THE HUNTER FAMILY

The name Hunter comes from the Latin and French Venator, meaning to hunt, or pertaining to hunting. From books on Heraldry, Coats of Arms, etc. the coats of arms of all of the Hunter families in Scotland and England resemble each other, showing that they were all related. They show hunting dogs, horns, etc.

The earliest known of the family were Norman and William Venator of Hun tar, in Normandy living between the years 1080-1185. They appear to have been amongst those who passed over to England after the Conquest, went northward in the train of David I, who he married Maud, a grand-niece of the Conqueror.

Norman Hunter received a grant of certain lands in the barony of Arnel, on the extreme west coast of the County of Ayr, which were subsequently distinguished as Arnel Hunter, and which now form part of the estate of Hunterston. These lands are the only portion of the district which from its earliest division in the 10th century have remained unalienated. Nesbet in his "Heraldry," in treating of the antiquity of this family, makes mention of a charter of King Alexander III, 1271, in which a grant of land was conferred upon William Baddelie with the exception of such lands as had been conferred upon Norman Hunter by King Malcolm IV, and this document is likewise referred to in the Haddington Collections, the same author states that, in an ancient charter, Arnel "is bounded with 'terris Norman Venator's', which are plainly the lands of Arnel Hunter, which lands are the lands of Hunterston. They were conferred doubtless on his appointment to the charge of the royal forests in the neighborhood. This was an office which the Exchequer rolls, and other state records prove to have been hereditary, and which the last mentioned royal charter is set forth in a grant by James IV, May 31, 1527.

Our ancestors left Normandy after the conquest of England by the Normans with William the Conqueror at the head, and settled in Scotland. The King of Scotland, David I appointed them to hunt for him in the royal forest, to keep the banquet tables supplied with deer, etc. The Venators were granted a large tract of land, or barony, by the king, according to the custom of the conquering Normans, who wrested the land from the Saxons, and gave it to their favorites. This land became known as Huntersdon, or Hunterton. The family name became changed to the Saxon, "Hunter." This means the same as the Latin "Venator," to hunt. From Burkes "Landed Gentry" comes the following: Descended from a common ancestor, two ancient families of the name of Hunter, disputed for some centuries the honor of precedence viz: Hunter of Hunterston Praefectus Venatorum Regiorum, in Cuninghame Co., Ayr, the present chief of the house, and Hunter of Polmoed Tweedale, nor extinct. It is noteworthy that the latter House was never styled "of that ilk," a distinction accorded pre-eminence to the Ayrshire family. Crawford, the author of the "Peera ge of Scotland" writing about the commencement of the last century, states the rival houses "are both reputed ancient officers of state". The family of the south is styled Hunter of Palmoed, or of Hunterston, whose writs I have seen nothing," and that in the west is designated Hunter of that ilk" or appears to have had at least a part of the estate they still possess in Cuninghame, while the Morvilles were lords of that country as far back as the reign of Alexander II (reigned 1214). From Burkes's "Landed Gentry," Vol. I, p. 835 Norman Venator or Hunter living between the years 1080 and 1165. William Venator, whose name appears as one of the witnesses with Hugh de Morville to an Inquisition A.D. 1116, by David I, (Then Prince of Cumberland) of the lands pertaining to the Church of Glasgow, are the earliest of the family on record. They appear to have been amongst those who passing over to England after the Conquest went Northward in the train of David I, who had married a grand-niece of the Conqueror.

Nisbit in his heraldry, in treating of the antiquity of this family makes mention of a charter of King Alexander III (began his reign in 1249) "quam in capella nostra irrevocabile fecimus anno gratias 1271" in which a grant of land was conferred upon William Baddebie, with the exception of such lands as had been granted to Norman Hunter by King Malcolm IV accepta terra quondam Normani Venatoris quod Rex Malcolmus frater Reits Wilmi avi nostri ei debet" and this document is likewise referred to in the Haddington Collections. The same author states that, in ancient charter Arnele "is bounded with 'terris Normani Venatoris,' which are plainly the lands of Arnele Hunter, which are the lands of Hunterston." They were conferred doubtless on his appointment to the charge of the royal forests in the neighborhood an office which the Exchequer rolls and other state records prove to have been hereditary, and of which the last mention in a Royal Charter is set forth in a grant of King James V dated 31 May 1527, by which the Island of Little Cumbrae is conferred upon Robert Hunter of Hunterston, and Janet Montgomerie, his spouse, and their heirs, "of which islands and lands, with pertinents, the said Robert and his predecessor were in times past for us and our predecessors, the hereditary keepers."

William Hunter in 1374 received by charter from King Robert II (beginning reign 1370) certain lands in Arnele, or Arnele Hunter now Hunterston which had belonged to Sir Andrew Campbell. These lands, granted to William Hunter "for faithful services rendered" are held nomine alii firma, a silver penny to be paid to the Sovereign if he comes to Arnele on the Feast of Pentecost. (These lands, Campbellton Hill, have retained through the centuries the name of their former owner.) This very interesting charter, signed by King Robert II at Sterling in the 4th year of his reign, witnessed by William Landal, Bishop of St. Andrews (1340-85) by the King's two elder sons, John, Earl of Carrick and Robert, Earl of Fife and Monteth and by Douglas and Erskine of the day, has been mounted and framed by the British Museum, with silver pennies of King Robert II and of King George V also, mounted in the frame for payment to his Majesty if he comes to Hunterston at Pentecost. Arms-vert, three dogs of the chase courant argent or collared or in a chief of the second as many hunting horns as the first, stringed gules supporters, two greyhounds argent, collared or Crest - a greyhound sejant argent, collared or Motto: "Cursum perficido."

Reference: Matthews Blue Book, p. 44

The earliest known of the Hunters of Northern England was William, who lived there in the early part of the 13th century. He may have been descended from the Scottish Hunters herein. William the Hunter, whose wife was of the Darreines of Whittonstall. The President of this archaeological Society exhibited a document dated 1180, affixed to which was the seal "William the Hunter." They might very fairly assume that William the Hunter was progenitor of families who adopted the surname of Hunter. p. XIIIV of Trans Durham and Northd Arch. Soc. I (Durham Pub. B)

The surname "Grosvenor" means "Chief Hunter" and also comes from the name "Venator," and the same place in Normandy and no doubt the two families are related. Our first American Hunter ancestor, Captain John Hunter whose wife was Margaret Albin was born in Medomsley, Durham County, England in 1666. The village of Medomsley appears in Bolden "Book in Hatfield's Survey 1183, as Freehold held by the Bishop by 22 shillings rent. At the death of the latter, its Lords held ground called Hemerstly, rendering 4 rent showing a great increase in the value of the land between the dates of the two grants, when Bishop Hatfield was completed. These estates were held by John D. Falton, Knight, and Hemerstly is stated to have been formerly William Medomsleys. The family of Medomsley, Lords of that ilk, occurs not infrequently at an early date, and seems not improbable as Sutus (?) remarks, that they were the ancestors of the Faltons, whose history belonged to Northumberland, rather than to Durham. Their arms are two lions passant, within a tressure (border) or (?) of (?) Scotland are of peculiar beauty. They occur on Hilton Castle, and on Bishop Hatfield's tomb, Medomsley being held by Mead money for payment, and not by knights services. It does not take much position in the story of the Episcopal franchise. No one connected with it occurs in the list of Durham knight present at the battle of Lewis, and there is reason to think its owners were absent for considerable period, at all events substantial evidence is found in it from early time. Among these one of the most interesting was William the hunter, who married a woman of the Darrienes of Whittonstall. His ancestors appear in the early court rolls of the manor and whose relationship to each other is now difficult or impossible to define. One family eventually became owner of the manor itself, after it had passed from Falton by blood to Hastings; from Hastings by sale to the wealthy Carrs of New Castle and from them by sale to the well-known Ducks of Durham from the heirs of Lady Duck it was acquired through purchase by the ancestors of General Martin Hunter. G.C.M.G. He was the gallant, youthful Lord and Father of the Hunter commemorated by his brother officers in Durham Cathedral, The Carrs lived at Medomsley, as a country seat; Their old house was opposite to the pleasant acres of Anton Hill. A section of these Hunters was prominent in the early days in the Quaker persecution. The Lords figured with those of Greencroft, in the throwing out of the first attempt to enclose Lancaster Common, claiming Medomsley fell along the boundary. The Hunters of Morninggate as a superior residence; now known as Medomsley Hall. Its boundary H _____ Lane keeping up the ancient association, have successfully held the inheritance which by blood is now in the Allgoods, Dr. Christopher Hunter, the eminent antiquary was of the Morninggate family. Another antiquarian member of the family made a sort of duplicate parish register, describing a member of a third Hunter family as Crafty Hunter. Craft's descendants are unknown, but his lands were sold to the Lords and retained his name, as were those of Allendale. 1 Allendale was the predecessor of a fourth stock of Hunters, who settled in Northumberland and whose representative committed himself irrevocably in the Rebellion of 1716, but who made his escape. An Andrew Hunter, owner of other lands, seems to be meant by the letters A.H. on an ancient gravestone in the churchyard. On the corbelled heads of its chancel, we see the same rare arrangement, which we find at Lancaster church. The work, like that of Lancaster, is of the early 13th century, but was not altered when Lancaster church became collegiate. In 1283 the mother church of Lancaster had to be adapted to the new constitution of the unaltered church of Medomsley church is of a singular elegance, and its pronouncement by Bill Magdalene. It may be attributed to the owner of the estate living at the time of Bolden Book, or his immediate successor. It seems to have suffered much from inroads of the Picts and Scots. None but Hunters are buried there. Medomsley is in the west division of Chester ward and north division of Durham County. It existed as early as 1185 A.D. It is about ten miles by water from Gateshead, and about twenty-five miles west of Newcastle, a seaport at the mouth of the Tyne River. The Hunter estate comprising two thousand acres was granted to them for special service to the king. The manor house, known as Medomsley Hall was still standing in 1902, and in good condition. It has been in possession of the family since 1584. Many prominent names of the family are recorded in the Medomsley church; Sir Thomas, Sir John; Sir William; General Martin Hunter; and a long list of others. Some were proprietors of the mine. Several old families of Hunters have for many generations dwelt in the valley of Derwent, and were all more or less intermarried with each other. Thomas Hunter, about 1700, Thomas Hunter, about 1700, intermarried with each other.

Margaret Layton, heiress through her mother, of the family of Alanshields, of the family of Alanshields, quite a small clan of the Hunters were resident up and down the valley, but principally at Medomsley. Here in 1675 was born Dr. Christopher Hunter. Ref. "Memorials of old Durham," by Henry R. Leighton, p. 249. Oscar F. Hunter, son of the 3rd Presiding Bishop tells--A deed, of the early part of the 13th century gives an incident of family history which may involve the dryness of legal and territorial details. A land-owner, by the name of Richard (of Durham Liber Vitae, p. 101. Richard cum locis, his wife Matilda, their sons Robert, Alan and William, and their daughter Beatrix and Cassandra) to whom, in order to distinguish him from other people of the name, the addition of 'cum locis' was made. We can picture him and perhaps have known persons whom the cognomen would fit), lived on the hill on the opposite side of Derwent, within sight of Whittonstall, at Medomsley. He had married a widow, apparently an heiress, called Guenilda, and had a stepson William.

William, who had married Ysabella, the granddaughter (neptis) of Bernard de Harenes, had given her a dowry, a third part of Medomsley, which was confirmed by Richard, with the locks, and his wife Guenilda. Richard had granted probably before then, with the consent of his wife and William, her heir, fifteen acres of land in the field of Medomsley, nearest to the land of Ebbecesterdene, towards the west, to the almoner of the convent of Durham. The gift was confirmed by Guenilda's son, who calls himself in the deed, 'Willelmus filius Willelmi ventoris', and on the seal 'Willelmus de Medomeleste' (Dur, Treas, No. 3. The seal is round, 1 3/4 inches in diameter, with the device of a hunting horn slung by a strap and with the legend SIGILLI WILLELMI DE MEDOMSELE.

Medomsley has been for centuries, and still is in possession of two branches of the family of Hunter, which can scarcely be a doubt, descend from William the Hunter and his mother, the heiress Guenilda. Ref: "A history of Northumberland," p. 181.

Thomas Hunter, about the end of the 14th century, married Margaret Layton, heiress through her mother of the family of Alanshields of Alanshields.

OUR EMIGRANT PROGENITOR, CAPTAIN JOHN HUNTER came to America with his family in 1722. He brought with him a number of families of Redemptionists. These Redemptionists were bound to him until they had earned their freedom by certain years of personal labor in his service. He also brought materials and tools for building.

John's daughter Mary had married William Hill and emigrated to America in 1717. He decided to join this daughter. Anthony Wayne, was a life-long companion of John Hunter. He and John came over in the same ship. They settled in the same county. The old Waynesborough farm, the old Wayne Mansion at Paoli, is now occupied by the fifth generation to bear the name William Anthony Wayne. Ref: the Philadelphia Inquirer, Jan. 1935 John Hunter, with his family first went to Downington, Chester Co. Pa. about twenty-five miles west of Philadelphia. At that time, this place was so far from settled parts that his wife was unwilling to remain there, and the place was given over to his son John. The elder John bought a large part of the Daniel Williamson estate, a tract of 1,000 acres in Newtown Square, Chester Co. Pa. about twelve miles from Philadelphia, taking title Mar. 17, 1723, whereon he settled and passed the remainder of his life.

Captain Anthony Wayne was the grandfather of General Anthony Wayne of the Revolutionary War. He commanded a troop of horse at the Boyne Water. Captain Anthony Wayne and John Hunter were vestrymen and perholders together in St. David's Episcopal Church at Radnor, Delaware Co. Pa. in 1725. It was built in 1715. It is one of the oldest in Pa. and the East. It has been rebuilt preserving the original pleasing lines, and style of archi-ecture. It is still being used. It is constructed of stone, and is beautifully landscaped with large trees, shrubs, vines, etc. It is a shrine which is visited each year by many tourists. Within the building, the family pew, which was shared by the Wayne family may still be seen, marked with their names—John Hunter died in April 1934. He is buried near a James Hunter, whose wife was Hannah Hunter. His grave is to the left of John Hunter's grave. To the right is one of Anthony Wayne, John and James, his son, were church wardens, the latter being a warden, 1748-1768-69; and a vestryman in 1738-81.

The inscription on John Hunter's tombstone reads, "In Memory of John Hunter who departed this life Apr. 1734, in the 67th year of his age." This monument erected by his son James. About two score of Captain John Hunter's descendants are buried in this graveyard.

Jan. 1, 1939 was the 194th anniversary of the birth of General Anthony Wayne, one of the most colorful of Revolutionary war heroes. Known as "Mad Anthony," because of his reckless bravery at Stony Point, and other battles. He later proved cautious, resourceful and patient, in conquering the Indians of Northwest Territory. Wayne was born in Easttown, Pa., and educated in Philadelphia. Although his bones were cremated in his own kettle, the legend persists that every year Wayne rises from his grave, mounts his steed "Nancy" and dashes up and down the highways of Paoli, Pa., brandishing his sword. This was the scene of a massacre during the Revolution. So vividly has this spectral sight of Anthony's ghost played upon the imagination of the natives, that the police have often been called in.

A famous old drawing depicts Wayne, though wounded in the head, gallantly leading his troops at the storming of Stony Point, on the Hudson, July 16, 1778. His reckless daring so inspired his men that they won a glorious victory. This triumph won him a gold medal and the thanks of Congress.

At Wayne blockhouse, on the shore of Lake Erie, Erie Co. Pa. the general died of the gout, Dec. 15, 1796. Here also is his original grave. At his request he was buried at the foot of the flagstaff of the fortress. His bones were dug up at the request of his son, Isaac in 1809 and boiled in his own kettle. After which they were buried in old St. David's Churchyard, where a monument is erected. Thousands visit his shrine yearly. His other earthly remains are interred in his original grave. Ref: "The Philadelphia Inquirer. Jan. 1, 1939.

Descendants of both Captain John Hunter and Captain Anthony Wayne were destined to serve their country in a military capacity. John's sons, James and Peter fought in the French and Indian War. James was a Captain in Colonel William Moore's regiment, Chester Co. Pa., troops, while his grandsons, John and James, sons of the above James served in the Revolution. John was a captain of the 4th co., Sixth Battalion, Chester Co. Associate Sarah, great granddaughter of the emigrant, John Hunter married William R. Van Leer, he was a great grandson of the emigrant Captain Anthony Wayne. Their grandson, Isaac Wayne Van Leer was mortally wounded in the Battle of Seven Pines in the Civil War.

NOTES ABOUT OUR IMMIGRANT ANCESTOR, CAPTAIN JOHN HUNTER

The Immigrant, John Hunter, was born 1666, the son of Peter and Ann, of East Collingwith, Aughton Parish, Yorkshire, England. His biographical sketch from the "two Hundredth Anniversary of the old St. David's Episcopal Church", Radnor, County of Delaware, Pennsylvania, and a record of being a vestryman at the same time, 1725, as his friend, Anthony Wayne, also a record of his burial in the church-yard of the Church appears; (GS 974.S14/R1 K2p, pp. 278, 346) JOHN HUNTER, son of Peter and Ann of Yorkshire, Yeoman- from Wicklow Co., Ireland and to Newtown about 1722 with Isaac and Anthony Wayne, Landowner, Delaware Co., Newtown. It is also stated in this book that the foundation of the church was laid May 9, 1715.

Captain JOHN HUNTER'S father was a prominent member of the Established Church of England. They lived in a time of bitter conflict between members of the Catholic, which had held supreme power in Europe for several centuries, and those who wished to purify the doctrines and practices of the Catholic faith, who were called Protestants.

Upon the accession of King James 11 to the throne, he moved to Rathdrum, Wicklow County, Ireland, to escape observation. John was then about twenty-one years¹⁶⁸¹ of age. Mary then became Queen of England, ruling jointly with her husband, the former William of Orange. Their armies followed the fugitive, James 11, into Ireland. John Hunter joined the Protestant Army, joining the Seventh Regiment of Horse, in Jan. 1689 at Newcastle.

The Earl of Marlborough led the forces of William and Mary. John was married between Jan. and Aug. 1689, in Derbyshire, as his regiment, known as Coy's Horse, were enroute to Liverpool.

They arrived in Ireland Aug. 1689, shortly after the seige of Derry (Londonderry), in which a wealthy member of the family, Captain Henry Hunter, had fought. They resided at Londonderry until at least the end of 1690, when the Corporation of Derry's 1690 Commission was prepared, on which John and Margaret's signature are to be found. Both he and Captain Henry Hunter, and his life-long friend, Captain Anthony Wayne had fought at the Battle of the Boyne River, in Meath Co., Ireland, July 1, 1690. John was Cornet in cavalry of King William's Army. On the return of Coy's Horse to England in 1692, John Hunter remained in Ireland with his family, in the Fifth Royal Regiment of Irish Dragoons.

1693: Captain of same horse troop. He left for France that year.

1694: Both Captain John Hunter and Captain Anthony Wayne served at Malphaquet, 2 Feb 1694. John became Quartermaster that year. They also took part in the seige of Namur, and were two of the British Grenadiers who freed the city of Namur, (which event is commemorated in a famous song.)

1695: Quartermaster, Also a Quartermaster in Ireland in 1702 First Troop. He was commissioned Cornet Nov. 1702; Lieutenant 24 Feb. 1708, First Troop, Brigadier Ross's Regiment of Royal Irish Dragoons. Six Troops of above regiment were employed beyond seas, and the remaining two troops in Ireland in 1702. This regiment served beyond seas, and the remaining two troops in Ireland in 1702.

1704: This regiment served under Marlborough at Blenheim in 1704 and throughout the remainder of Marlborough's campaign. (The battle of Blenheim was later immortalized in a poem by Robert Southey). John was wounded at Blenheim in the hip which caused a slight lameness the rest of his life. The great battle of Blenheim, a town on the River Danube, was fought against the French and Bavarians. It was a famous victory, but 37,000 lives were lost.

1706: Served at Ramillies.

1707: Served at Oudenard.

1708: Lieutenant to an additional troop in the same regiment 34 Feb 1708.

1713: John Hunter to be Captain of Foot, 9 June 1713. Marlborough was dismissed with disgrace that year and the war across the seas, in which John Hunter fought, ended the treaty of Utrecht.

The first engagement immediately above the battle of Boyne made the strongest impression on Captian Hunter, for it was the one remembered among his descendants. At this time he was a standard bearer in the cavalry of the English Dragoons, who fought against the Irish Dragoons. (Irish Catholic rebels under the command of the fugitive King James 11). Its outcome was the final decisive defeat of James 11 and the Catholic cause in England.

From the beginning of his reign, James 11 (1685-1688) had been determined to restore Catholicism to England, Ireland, Wales and Scotland. The English parliament was determined that all England would remain Protestant. So they plotted to bring William of Orange, the leader of the Protestant forces in Europe, to come to their rescue. William was also offered naval and military support in his efforts to prevent the return of Catholicism to the Low Countries, the Palatinate, and the Germanic peoples. William of Orange came to England in 1680. James' army revolted and he fled to his Catholic cousin Louis XIV in France. The English parliament was now in full control. They rewrote the English constitution and offered the English crown to William of Orange and his wife, Mary, who was a Protestant daughter of James by a former marriage. They accepted and England thus became a constitutional monarchy. This revolution is known in history as the "Bloodless" or "Glorious Revolution!" Ref: Beginning with Battle of Boyne, is from Edward Hunter Faithful Steward by William E. Hunter, M.D., pp 5 and 6.

John and Anthony Wayne were married about the same time, the latter marrying a native of Holland while Margaret Albin, John's wife, was said to have been of French descent. She probably was descended from the French Huguenots who came into England. John's ring bearing this inscription, "Keep this in remembrance of me," 1693", and a pistol and holster, which he used in the battle of Bynne, were brought to America by him. The ring was probably given to him as he left for service in France. The two former articles are preserved among his descendants.

After the war, the two friends were sent to Ireland with the Earl of Marlborough to sustain the rights of the Protestant Army. Later, as they would not submit to Catholic rule, they emigrated to America with their families from Londonderry, Ireland. They crossed the ocean in the same ship to Philadelphia.

John's daughter, Mary, had married William Hill and emigrated to America in 1717. John decided to join this daughter, coming in 1722. Both Anthony and John settled in Chester County, Pa. Anthony located in what is now Paoli, and John in Downingtown which is about twenty-five miles west of Philadelphia. John's wife was unwilling to remain there as at that time it was so far from settled parts. John placed the land in charge of his oldest son, John, Jr. This property was divided at the death of the elder John between John, Jr. and his brother William. Captain John Hunter bought a large part of the Daniel Williamson estate, a 350 acre tract in Newtown Square, Chester Co., Pa. This is about twelve miles west of Philadelphia. He took title 17 Mar. 1723. He erected a mansion house considered very pretentious in those days. He brought with him from the old country materials and tools for building. He also brought a number of redemptionists who worked for him as mechanics and servants until they had paid back their passage over the ocean. This house is still standing (1911); a short distance from Newtown Square and a short distance back from the Westchester Turnpike. Anthony's mansion is still in a fair state of preservation. It is owned by William Anthony Wayne, a member of the fifth generation to bear the Wayne name.

John Hunter and Anthony Wayne were vestrymen of the St. David's Episcopal Church at Radnor, Delaware Co., Pa. in the year 1725. It is one of the oldest in Pa. and the East. It has been rebuilt, preserving the original pleasing lines and style of architecture and is still being used. It is constructed of stone and is beautifully landscaped, with large trees, shrubs, vines, etc. It is a shrine which is visited each year by many tourists. Within the building, the family pew which was shared by the Wayne family may still be seen, marked with their names. John Hunter died in April 1734. He was buried in the graveyard of the church. Close to John's grave is that of his son James and James' wife Hannah. The burial plot is near that of the Wayne family. About two score of John's descendants are buried in this graveyard.

Anthony was the grandfather of General Anthony Wayne, one of the seven generals of the Revolutionary War. Descendants of both of them were destined to serve their country in a military capacity. John's sons, James and Peter, fought in the French and Indian War. James was a Captain in Colonel William Moore's regiment, Chester Co., Pa. while his grandsons, John and James, sons of the above James, served in the Revolutionary War. John was a Captain of the 4th Co., sixth Battalion, Chester Co., Associators and Militia. Sarah, great granddaughter of the emigrant John Hunter married William R. Van Leer. He was a great grandson of the emigrant, Captain Anthony Wayne. Their grandson, Isaac Wayne Van Leer was mortally wounded in the Battle of Seven Pines in the Civil War.

EDWARD HUNTER and THE WALLACE SEMINARY

Setting - Newtown Square, Pa.
Time 1840's

Characters: Edward Hunter
Mayor
or squire
Several townspeople
2 Missionaries.

Act I

Edward: Looks quite different from the old log Seminary building. The old one burned to the ground just because of carelessness. These stone walls wont ever burn. What's for sure. How do you think it looks?

Onlooker: O.K. O.K. , Those beautiful big oaks make a perfect setting.

Onlooker: Well, Edward, you did it again. Helped the whole Community by rebuilding the old school. What do you think we oughta call it?

Edward: I suppose Wallace Seminary will do just fine. (Edward puts the sign over the door and turns to the mayor)

I want this school to be used for the worship of God. For all denominations. All preachers will be welcome here and their people too.

Tell you what I'll do. I'll lease it to the Twp for 99 years for $1 a year. Providing all preachers and worshipers of God will be free to come here.

Mayor: We can agree on that. You bet we can. We'll draw up the agreement immediately.

Edward: Now remember, all preachers can teach here or the lease will be broken. Agreed?

Mayor and Onlookers (All agreed) Agreed (Shake hands.) Mayor and the onlookers walk off the stage.

Act II

Setting: People seated. Missionaries behind the table, with their books under their arms. Missionaries facing the two-people. Mayor and Edward Hunter seated among them.

Missionaries: It's good to see you all here today. As you know, we are missionaries from the Mormon Church. We have some important things to tell you today.

Other Missionary: Just like the Bible you read, this book, the Book of Mormon, tells us what the Lord wants us to do. (Holds up the Book of Mormon)

Onlooker: How do you know that?

Missionary: Because I read the Book of Mormon.

Onlooker: We don't need anything but the Bible.

Missionary: This Book will answer that question for you. (Holds up the Book)

Onlooker: Throw them out. (Others join in)

Edward goes to the front of the room and speaks.)

No, let the missionaries talk. This building is for all of us, Mormons, Catholics, Protestants and all.

Onlooker: But the Mormons are different.

Edward: I want to hear what they have to say.

Mayor: Just a minuts-Who else would like to hear what they have to say?
(no hands go up but Edwards)

Mayor turns to Edward: Too, bad, it looks like the majority rules.

Edward: If the Mormons can't preach here like the others, then I will break the 99 year lea

Mayor: (gets up comes to the front of the room.)

We better stop and think about this a minute. How many of you like to come here to listen to the word of the Lord? (all hands go up)

Voice: But not to the Mormons.

Mayor continues. Can't be that way. It's either with them or not at all.
You had better think again about it.

Pause:

Onlookers: They can preach here but you can bet I wont be here.
Not me Not me.

Edward: ~~But~~ you can bet I'll be here. (shakes the hands of the missionaries)

Onlookers: ~~I'll~~ ^{with him} I'll be here.

Small child: Me too. (Both go up and shake the hands of Edward and the missionaries.)
