The Parochial Register begins in 1607. "A Register Booke," &c. for which the churchwardens Anthony Hunter, George Curry, Thomas Merley, and Robert Richardson disbursed "for the parchment, sixtene grotes; and for the covering and byndyng, two shillings and sixpence. Paid unto the hands of John Hall, of Consett, Gentleman."

1622. John Stephenson, innosant, buried the 20 December. William Elrington, Gent. who lived at Espersheales, in y<sup>e</sup> parish of Bywell, died at Ebchester, and was buried at Shotley Bridge, March 5, 1700-1.

CHRISTOPHER HUNTER, M.B.—Christopher Hunter was the only son of Thomas Hunter, of Medomsley, Gent. by his second wife Margaret Readshaw<sup>o</sup>. He was born .. July, 1675, and was sent at an early age to the Free Grammar School of Kepyner, in Houghton-le-Spring<sup>p</sup>. At the age of eighteen he was removed to the University of Cambridge, and was admitted Pensioner of St. John's College in 1692, under the tuition of Mr. Thomas Brown<sup>q</sup>, and of the eminent scholar and antiquary Thomas Baker<sup>r</sup>, whose sister Margaret was the wife of John Hunter, Christopher's elder brother. Distinguished by regularity of conduct and a severe attention to his academical studies, young Hunter soon became a favourite pupil of Mr. Baker; and it may seem probable that from this connection with the venerable antiquary of St. John's, he either imbibed or confirmed that genuine taste for antiquarian pursuits, which, if it did not open the path to worldly profit or distinction, afforded at least a rational and innocent source of amusement during the literary leisure of a long and tranquil life. Mr. Hunter took his degree of B. M. in 1698. He soon after retired to his native country, and fixed himself in medical practice<sup>s</sup> at Stockton on Tees. In 1702 he was married at Durham Abbey, to Elizabeth, one of the two daughters and coheirs of John Elrington, Esq. of Espersheales. With this lady Dr. Hunter received a considerable landed estate, and he had also a very handsome provision settled on him by his father. To these resources were added the emoluments of a respectable practice; yet, with the very common fate of literary men, Dr. Hunter seemed destined never to be rich. Like poor Anthony à Wood, "heraldry, [music, and painting] did so much crowd upon him, that he could not avoid them; and could never give a reason why he should delight in those studies more than in others, so prevalent was nature, mixed with a generosity of mind and a hatred to all that was servile, sneaking, or advantageous for lucre sake<sup>t</sup>. A few years after his marriage, Dr. Hunter removed from Stockton to Durham, a place much more congenial probably to his habits, both as to society and as to the facilities which he found in indulging his antiquarian taste. Here he revelled in abbey-legers, registers, and chartularies. The library of the Dean and Chapter, stored with sound history and topography, and with expensive books of reference, stood open to him<sup>u</sup>. He corresponded with Gordon, Lister, and Horsley<sup>x</sup>; and he discovered

<sup>o</sup> Christopher Hunter was left an orphan at an early age, for his mother was buried in Eshe Chapel, 1 March, 1675-6, and his father died in 1685. See the Pedigree.

<sup>p</sup> In 1724 Dr. Hunter placed an inscription over the porch-door of Kepyner School, commemorating its founders, Heath and Gilpin. See Vol. I. p. 102.

<sup>t</sup> It may be also easily proved that, like Anthony, "he took great delight in reading the Display of Heraldry, written by John Guillim, and in other books of that faculty, written by John Boswell, John Perne, &c. and endeavoured to draw out and trick armes with his pen" (Life of A. à Wood, p. 44) for I have an illuminated and bearded Guillim (which had belonged to the Durham Antiquary, Mickleton), and since passed through the hands of Dr. Hunter and Thomas Gyll, Esq. receiving large additions from each successive proprietor, so that it now resembles the pied doublet of Sir Davy Lindsay, "proudly shewing Gules Argent, Or, and Azure growing." See Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, vol. IX. p. 691. Thomas Gyll, Esq. as appears by the Pedigree, was nephew to Dr. Hunter, son of his half-sister Alice.

<sup>u</sup> The story of Dr. Hunter's being excluded the Library for throwing an ink bottle over a valuable copy of Magna Charta, is, I sincerely hope, for the honour of all parties concerned, apocryphal.

<sup>x</sup> Part of Dr. Hunter's correspondence with Horsley and with Gordon, will appear under LANCHESTER. Three letters from Dr. Lister to our Antiquary are published in Nichols's Literary Anecdotes, see vol. IX. p. 690-1. Dr. Hunter also rendered considerable assistance to Mr. Wilkins in compiling his Concilia; and he contributed many valuable materials to Bourne's "History of Newcastle."

INSTRUCTIONS
The first generation column has room for ten children and their spouses. If there are actually only eight children, every other set of spaces should be left blank. If only four children, then use only four sets of spaces, etc. To obtain an even distribution of descendants, it is recommended that the 3rd generation column be filled in first. Determine the total number of grandchildren their spouses and then space them throughout the column leaving the spaces between the various family lines. In the columns for the 3rd, 4th and 5th generations the year of birth or death or date of marriage may be listed after each individual if desired. The fourth generation column on the reverse side is for listing just the great-grandchildren (two lines are provided for each child) and not their spouses, which are listed on the reverse side. This information is carried over to the reverse side. The number of the family which each great-grandchild comes from is printed on the front side. Also be written on the reverse side the 4th generation column previous person's name. If more information is obtained on the 4th and 5th generations than there is room for on the reverse side, then additional charts should be purchased and just the reverse side of this information.
